BITHENERGY CEO Robert L. Wallace wins 2010 Daily Record Innovator of the Year Award

Baltimore, MD – October 28, 2010

Robert L. Wallace, CEO of BITHENERGY, was honored today by being named an Innovator of the Year by The Daily Record. The Innovator of the Year award was created in 2002 to honor Maryland businesses and individuals who have had a positive effect and tremendous impact in Maryland.

“My staff and I are very appreciative and humbled by this recognition. A major part of the corporate ethos at BITHENERGY is that “to whom much is given, much is required.” Consequently, our engineers intentionally look for ways to use technology, in this case Green Technology, as a tool to benefit humanity and to provide economic opportunities for those among us who are often overlooked and forgotten. Our work on providing hybrid renewable energy systems for low-to-moderate income neighborhoods fits perfectly into both our corporate strategy and our commitment to empowering the community in which we operate. Just in the City of Baltimore alone, there are over 45,000 row homes that can benefit from renewable energy solutions that minimize energy consumption and use the energy savings toward education and entrepreneurial credits for residents in the community,” Robert L. Wallace stated.

Winners were honored at the American Visionary Art Museum on October 21 2010, at 6 p.m.
